ALS Times goes cyber

Pascual Flores, formerly from the Fort Dix Public Affairs Office, joined Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst Oct. 1, 2009, as a result of the 2005 Base Realignment and Closure Commission. Flores served as the first editor for the Air, Land and Sea Times from Jan. 8 through Dec. 24, 2010. His 17 years combined active duty and civil service experience proved vital to kick starting the joint base paper.

Senior Airman Bryan Swink served as second editor of the ALS Times from January to December 2011. Swink was the first airman assigned to the ALS Times in the editor position, providing insight, knowledge and energy to the newspaper. Swink is currently assigned to the 60th Air Mobility Wing Public Affairs Office, Travis Air Force Base, Calif.

Senior Airman Dennis Sloan served as writer for the newspaper before his assignment as the third editor of the ALS Times from January to April 2012. His dedication to work and improving his photographic skills allowed him to tell the base's story through pictures. Sloan is currently assigned to the 628th Air Base Wing PAO, Joint Base Charleston, S.C.

Airman 1st Class Ryan Throneberry served as the fourth editor of the ALS Times from April 2012 to October 2013. As the longest serving editor, Throneberry's sharp wit and quirky personality was integral in grasping readers' attention, in both newspaper headlines and social media. Throneberry, still assigned to the JB MDL Public Affairs office, now works in the Community Relations section.

Airman 1st Class Sean Crowe is the current and final editor of the ALS Times. He will lead the way as we make this transition and is the first editor of the ALS e-Times; his focus will be on telling the base story through enhanced communication technology. Crowe is currently assigned to the JB MDL PA Command Information section.

By Pascual Flores
 Joint Base Public Affairs Office

This last print edition of the Air, Land and Sea Times – the premier newspaper of America's only tri-service base, marks the end of an old tradition and the beginning of a new era as the Joint Base Public Affairs office focuses on enhanced communication. This new communication approach will utilize multiple tools, including the joint base web page, social media, mybaseguide app, and their latest creation, an electronic version of the ALS E-times.

On Jan. 8, 2010, Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst produced its first edition of the Air, Land and Sea Times, a newspaper designed to reflect the unity of our tri-service joint base, representing the Airmen, Soldiers, Sailor, Marines, Coast Guardmen, civilian and military families who live and work on the installation.

Prior to the concept of joint base, the two major newspapers were the Fort Dix Post and the McGuire Air Base Airtides, later renamed Warrior Spirit.

Now, five editors and 200 issues later, the joint base continues to help its readers to understand the missions and war-fighting capabilities of JB MDL through features, news pieces, commentaries and photographs. Additionally, the Joint Base PA team will continue to communicate issues which impact quality of life, plus a comprehensive list of base activities, highlighting the many talents of the men and women who work here via enhanced communication technology.

People are center of patriot command

By Capt. Antonia Greene-Edwards
 174th Infantry Brigade
 Public Affairs

Each level of command will always have a lesson learned. For the outgoing commander of the 174th Infantry Brigade, Col. Craig A. Osborne, the patriot command was about people.

"This assignment wasn't about tactics and procedures as much as it was about people," said Osborne. "I learned the most about people here, what motivates individuals and different leadership styles."

After 29 months in command, Osborne handed the Patriot brigade reins over to incoming commander, Col. Michael E. Wawrzyniak, Dec. 6, 2013, during a traditional change of command ceremony. "Change is good. It breathes new life into an organization," said Osborne during his final brigade town hall meeting as commander of the 174th Infantry Brigade, headquartered at Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst, N.J.

Hosted by Maj. Gen. Jeffrey L. Bailey, First Army Division East commander, both Osborne and Wawrzyniak participated in the historic passing of the brigade colors with more than 250 patriot Soldiers in formation. The colors, or unit flag, represent the brigade. The passing signifies the exchange of trust and well-being of the command from one commander to another. "In my assessment, this brigade has made significant progress over the last two years, and that is a testament to Col. Osborne's investment in leader development, and moreover, his dedication to the training mission is the hallmark of his work and cornerstone of success here," expressed Bailey during his address to the crowd.

During Osborne's tenure more than 10,000 troops mobilized, trained and deployed from JB MDL in support of overseas contingency operations.

"My most significant achievement is that every one of the 10,144 mobilized service members trained here since July 19, 2011, returned home safely," remarked Osborne.

The theme of Osborne's farewell speech, and essentially his time as patriot brigade commander, was 'people.'

colors; it is the people that are the brigade," said Osborne. "And each of you is what makes our brigade and our mission successful. It is you I will miss the most."

Osborne shared his command philosophy for mission success when he arrived in the summer of 2011. Depicted as a structure reminiscent of the Parthenon, to him, mission success is built on a foundation of people and culture and from there stretch the pillars of leading, training, sustaining and caring.

Osborne and his wife Lois are scheduled to report to their next assignment later this month in Stuttgart, Germany where Osborne will serve as joint operations officer for United States European Command.

Wawrzyniak, who recently completed the Naval War College in Newport, R.I., assumes military science at Syracuse University and later professor of military science at the University of Notre Dame.

From June 2008 to November 2010, he commanded 4th Squadron, 73rd Cavalry Regiment, 4th Brigade Combat Team, 82nd Airborne Division. Under his leadership, the squadron prepared for and deployed to Farah Province, Afghanistan, in support of Operation Enduring Freedom. After command, he completed a joint tour at Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe in Mons, Belgium, serving as an assistant operations officer and as executive officer to the chief of operations and intelligence.

Wawrzyniak is no stranger to First Army. He served as both comptroller, Joint Task Force, First Army East Headquarters and later as executive officer to the deputy commanding general of First Army.

"Colonel Wawrzyniak is the best new fit for this outfit," said Bailey. "He is an adaptive, flexible and competent leader ready to take on the mission."

Wawrzyniak is joined by his wife of 20 years, Pam, and their two children.

In coordination with mission partners, 174th Inf. Bde. executes and certifies individual and collective training in accordance with theater-specific standards at JB MDL for designated service members to prepare them for deployment in support of overseas contingency operations.
